

Kate drives 'em wild babe puts on M-way show that gorgeous Kate Price – would have NO problems getting wanted one. Strokes would give their right titillation a fair portion of their ever stunning curves resting in beside them. Episode of When Jordan Met Peter, as the 26-year-old is y when her new Ferrari breaks 25 (in the picture, right). in stay in the car and wait for struts along the hard shoulder miniskirt and skin-tight top. nobody stops to help! the model mum calls lover Andre with a cry, "I don't want yet: I haven't done my Westlife that Kate is finally saved. the dramatic rescue is just one in a roller-coaster day that race around a go-kart course her Ferrari on a racetrack. comes home to find that Peter, 31, has covered the outside walls of her house in pink fairy lights – as a Christmas treat.

Byil Boucher

But then in Jordan's world nothing is very normal. The series, which is soon to have an extended weekly run on ITV2, has already shown the lovers travel to hotspots such as the Maldives, Caribbean and Cyprus.

Kate also famously tucked into some fish eyes on ITV1's I'm A Celebrity and recently managed to build a swimming pool and play area for disadvantaged kids in her home town of Brighton.

Rumour has it that Mr Nasty Simon Cowell, 45, has also asked the beautiful babe to become a judge on the next series of X Factor.

A source close to Cowell, 45, confides: "Jordan would add some extra glamour to the competition and I'm sure her fans would tune in to watch her.

"She'll be great and has definitely got The X Factor."

So if you like to belt out some classics while charging down the M25 you may have missed your chance of stardom – and a close-up view of a national treasure.

Unlucky boys!

JANE O'GORMAN SOLVES YOUR PROBLEMS TODAY AND EVERY DAY

I wanna leave him for bi pal

AFTER months of nagging, my boyfriend finally persuaded me to arrange a threesome between us and my mate.

This friend is openly bisexual and has never made a secret of fancying my boyfriend and me.

I invited her round to our flat and as I poured the first glass of wine she tenderly stroked my hair and told me that I looked gorgeous.

Just then my boyfriend walked in and popped a horny video into the machine.

I felt extremely nervous and drank greedily, but as the wine began to do its stuff I gradually lost my inhibitions.

My fella asked us to sit on the sofa while he stripped off for us.

Then it was my mate's turn. She performed a slow, sensual strip and encouraged me to take off her G-string.

By the time that I was naked too, I was feeling extremely horny — for her.

Touched

All three of us made our way to the bedroom where we kissed, touched and loved for hours. But if I'm completely honest, it was my mate who did it for me the most.

She really turned me on and gave me the most powerful orgasm I've ever experienced.

I've not stopped thinking about her ever since. How do I begin to tell my boyfriend that he's out and she's in?

JANE SAYS: Sexual threesomes may seem exciting and thrilling.

But inevitably, there are complications with someone getting hurt.

In this case, it looks like your boyfriend is the odd one out.

He may have been the one to instigate your sex game, but he's now surprised by requirements.

All you can do is to be honest with him.

Explain that your feelings for him have changed and that you'd prefer to spend more time with your friend.

Be prepared for the fact that he'll be shocked and angry, but what other choice do you have?

It might be tempting to carry on with your friend behind his back, but that wouldn't be fair.

RIGHT TO REPLY

TWO weeks ago I published this letter from a reader:

MY 13-year-old daughter has come under the influence of a much older girl.

Suddenly she's sulky and rude and I don't know where she is from one minute to the next. Her new best friend is 19 and a tough cookie.

But she didn't come home the other night and money has started going missing.

Here are some of your replies:

Two years ago my daughter started dating an unsuitable boy, but I didn't interfere. One day a neighbour told me that my daughter was taking drugs. Later I found out she was working as a prostitute.

Now I have no idea where she is. Every day I blame myself for not being stronger and saving her.

NAME WITHHELD

MY middle daughter was very badly bullied at school. An older girl continually picked on her and forced her to steal money.

As soon as I realised what was going on, I was down on that school like a ton of bricks. I suggest that if your reader wants to help her daughter, she needs to get tough.

Mrs DENISE JONES, Wolverhampton.

YOUR reader must show her daughter that she is in charge. She's got to man-mark her every inch of the way and let her know that she is loved and cherished. That's what I did when my daughter started playing up — and it worked.

DANNY HILL, Cumbria.

NOW for this week's problem. Send your advice to the address at the foot of the page. Your letters will be printed in two weeks' time.

PEOPLE have told me my best mate calls me her "fat friend". She only hangs around with me because I make her look gorgeous.

Apparently, my "fat arse" and "triple chins" (her words) mean that I'm no threat. She's Lisa Snowdon to my Lisa Riley.

I feel so hurt and humiliated, especially as she's always so nice to me. When we're together she's always suggesting new hairstyles and outfits — I couldn't bear to think that she's been using me.

My mum's just mad for men

MY mum is a tart. Suddenly she's shagging anything with a pulse.

She's 50 and her current lover is a 26-year-old brickie.

He's gorgeous and very committed to her, but she thinks nothing of cheating on him with guys of all ages.

She regularly goes out on the pull with her "Saga-lager" mates and rarely comes home empty-handed. I've seen everything from a grey-haired grandad to a bling-bling fly boy come down our stairs recently.

The other night I walked in the front room and actually caught her giving a guy a blow job.

Begging

I've absolutely no idea who he was and haven't seen him again.

I keep begging her to be careful. She just laughs and says, "I'm hardly going to get pregnant at my age, am I love?" I'm worried that she's out of control. Since my Dad left her for a younger woman, she's been determined to live life to the full.

She's dyed her hair, taken to wearing high heels and staying out late.

But surely I'm not alone in thinking older people can get sexually transmitted infections too?

JANE SAYS: I'm afraid that age is no protection against STIs (Sexually Transmitted Infections). If your mum is having promiscuous, unprotected sex, then she's just as likely to catch anything from herpes to HIV as a younger person.

And STIs among older people are on the increase. I know that you've already tried talking to her, but do try again.

Warn her that infected men don't come with a label. The most upright and wholesome man can be a carrier.

Suggest that she checks out playingsafely.co.uk or calls the Sexual Health Line on 0800 567 123 for information on condoms and safer sex.

Obviously it is difficult for you to preach to your mother about morals, but she really does need to rethink her dangerous lifestyle.

SELFISH GROOM

MY boyfriend and I are supposed to be getting married next September, but he's quibbling about every penny I spend.

I want a big do with all the trimmings. He wants everything to be as low-key as possible. I want a flash meal, eight bridesmaids and a horse-drawn carriage. He wants the church hall and a pay bar.

Yet when it comes to his stag night he's pushing the boat out. Instead of the usual pub crawl or weekend in Blackpool, he's planning a week of water sports with his single mates in Thailand. The stag bash will be more expensive than our honeymoon.

But there's no arguing with him. He says that he's entitled to his final fling, and he's going to have it.

JANE SAYS: I suspect that your boyfriend isn't quite ready to give up his bachelorhood quite yet. The fact that he's selfishly putting his own enjoyment before your wedding is very worrying.

Insist on a heart-to-heart and find out where his priorities really lie. If he's not totally committed to the idea of marriage and completely ready for the responsibility, perhaps you'd be better off postponing things.

A stag do in Blackpool is one thing, but one in Thailand is a whole new box of ping pong balls.

CHRISTMAS is a time for tradition. So who better to offer advice on how to have a great British knees-up than our favourite comedy pub landlord and Hell's Kitchen star, Al Murray.

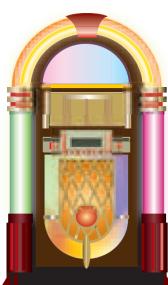

The ranting publican is straight out of the old school and reckons the old ways are the best.

And as with all pub landlords, it's his gaff, so they're his rules. You have been warned... cheers!

GETTING WASTED
The landlord says: Christmas is a time for all the family so the best thing to get through it is to make sure you get a skintful.

Mind you, it's all about pacing yourself. Christmas and New Year are a marathon, not a sprint. None of us want to be the Paula Radcliffe of booze and drop out before New Year's Eve.

FESTIVE TIPPLES

The landlord says: Make sure you drink the correct drinks - pint for the fellas, glass of white wine/fruit-based drink for the lady, though mulled wine is allowed for the gentleman on the grounds of its seasonal nature. And it's virtually soft anyway.

DRINKING AND DRIVING

The landlord says: Don't drink and drive. The best way to ensure you don't drink and drive is to get the lady in your life pregnant, that way she has to drive. And if that isn't the best argument you've heard for knocking up your girlfriend, lads, I don't know what is.

PACING YOURSELF

The landlord says: On Christmas Day the important thing is to drink just enough so you can nap through the Queen's Speech, then get your second wind and coast through EastEnders as best you can. Go for it in the evening and when the Harry Potter film comes on play the drinking game.

Every time that ginger lad pulls that squiffy face of his you have to take a drink, and drink a full pint down when they realise that Voldemort is the bad guy.

HOW TO ROMANCE A LADY OVER CHRISTMAS

The landlord says: For the single fellas Christmas can be a trying time, but the good Lord gave us mistletoe so the ugly could experience love and/or a fumble at the very least. Women are complex, but if you compliment them on their hair you're off to a terrific start.

CHRISTMAS CHAT-UP LINES

The landlord says: "I like your hair" is as good a ploy as any to start. I have a drinker called Jim who swears by the one in 10 rule.

He reckons if you're direct with the ladies and tell them exactly what you're after, then one in 10 will succumb. Of course the other nine think you're a charmless tw*t.

CONVERSATION OVER THE DINNER TABLE

The landlord says: At Christmas you should talk about the birth of Jesus and how marvellous it was that Christ came in December or else there'd be nothing to look forward to in the winter. And if you've pulled it's probably not best to go on about it in front of the wife.

TIPPLE: Wine for ladies

QUEEN'S SPEECH

The landlord says: The Queen's Speech is a marvellous institution. It's my prediction she'll go on about the Commonwealth and our brave boys and girls, and then return to her dinner of swan with all the trimmings.

CHRISTMAS RECORDS

The landlord says: There is a place called Christmas Island where it is Christmas every day. Someone tell Wizzard and they can knock it off.

HOW A PUNTER SHOULD TREAT HIS PUB LANDLORD AT CHRISTMAS

The landlord says: Your publican doesn't have Christmas like you punters, because he is your Christmas. So treat him with respect and please take your glasses back to the bar. Cheers!

Fine state of affairs

GARDEN STATE (15)

ZACH Braff, the daffy doctor from the TV sitcom Scrubs, scores gold as writer and director of this oddball romantic comedy.

He hits the bull as a small-time Hollywood actor who comes home to New Jersey for his mother's funeral.

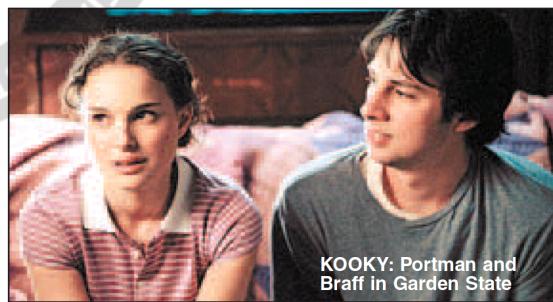

He also scores romancing kooky, congenital liar Natalie Portman – in her best performance. He meets her while a blind woman's guide-dog bonks his leg in a waiting room. (Strangely, David Blunkett isn't credited as the pet's trainer).

The blend of off-the-wall characters, like the man breakfasting in armour, frequently surreal situations and wild dialogue adds up to an unusual, enjoyable comedy.

LOS ANGELES PLAYS ITSELF (PG)

THIS consistently-fascinating documentary tells the story of LA, easily the world's most-filmed city, through a compelling collection of feature film clips. And while it's long it's never boring and it's a rare treat, especially for movie buffs

A BITE OF ALL RIGHT

WEAPON OF MASS DESTRUCTION:
Snipes on the hunt for Dracula

BLADE: TRINITY (15)
DRAC'S back and biting mad in a superior shocker that's just the ticket for everyone with a taste for terror – except for Tony Blair after the humiliation he's suffered because they couldn't find WMDs in Iraq.

It's Blair's bad luck that the desperate hunt for weapons of mass destruction missed the most dangerous WMD of them all. Wicked Monster Dracula. He's asleep in darkest Iraq waiting to embark a new reign of bloody terror. But it's mankind's good luck that when modern blood drinkers unleash Dracula, Wesley Snipes is there as sword-wielding slice-and-dice vampire slayer Blade to kick vampire ass.

Even though the FBI, vicious vampires and all-powerful Dracula – who can now walk in daylight without burning to a crisp – are all out for his blood, Snipes is still there to save the day, with a little help from Nightstalkers Jessica Biel and Ryan Reynolds.

Cracking

Writer-director David S Goyer starts the show off with a bang, with the first 10 minutes containing more blazing action than a whole Indiana Jones movie. He never lets the chills and thrills peter out or allows the cracking pace to slow – all the way to the sword-slashing climax when Snipes and Dracula fight to the death, man to monster.

While there's even more of the first two hit films' fangs-and-fighting formula, Trinity, with its super-cool hero played to the max by Snipes, happily has its tongue firmly in its bloody cheek and doesn't take itself too seriously.

Biel fires a crossbow with an accuracy that would make King Arthur's Keira Knightley green with envy. Reynolds is a hunky human hero and Parker Posey is a hoot as a vampire with the silliest hairdo since Brucie's TV toupee. If you fancy a riot of shocks and stunts it's perfect for you.

while an old regular haunts the opera house

SLOWLY DOES IT:
Emmy Rossum and Gerard Butler. Right, the movie looks stunning, as does Jennifer Ellison, who co-stars

PHANTOM FALLS FLAT

THE PHANTOM OF THE OPERA (12A)
MORE than 70 million people have seen Andrew Lloyd Webber's hit musical on stage.

And now millions more can enjoy it as the movie hits the big screen in spectacular style, dressed to the nines in Oscar-worthy settings and costumes.

It's the frequently-filmed story of the evil Phantom who stalks the Paris Opera House, killing anyone who stands in the way of his beautiful singing protege Christine, played here by Emmy Rossum in a great star-making performance.

Lloyd Webber and director Joel Schumacher adapted the show for the screen and the trouble is that they have conspired to make a film that's often snail-slow and overstuffed with Lloyd Webber's (for me) trite tunes.

Gerard Butler's Phantom lacks charisma and isn't really all that scary. Miranda Richardson acquits herself well as the only actor with a French accent and Simon Callow and Claran Hinds are good value as a comedy duo.

And then there's Minnie Driver (whose singing is doubled but whose acting, sadly, isn't) chewing the scenery to shreds as an irritatingly OTT operatic Diva. I blame the Phantom who tries to dispose of her early on but muffs the job.

Still, there's much to admire in the stunning settings in, and under, the Opera House and fans of the stage show will doubtless have a ball.

MARIA treats the terminally lovesick Tyrone to a thank-you meal in tonight's Corrie (ITV, 7.30pm). But since the guy is clearly still besotted with her, and not exactly making a secret of the fact, it's hardly surprising that the conversation starts to get a bit awkward, forcing Maria to be at her diplomatic best. "I like your tie," she tells him, rather bafflingly – until you realise that what she's actually just said is: "I like you, Ty." Even so, it's obvious he wants a lot more than just to be liked. Loved, for example. Or laid at the very least. And hey, waddya know, he actually ends up getting his wish. The dramatic turning point comes when this Dave bloke – the one for whom Maria stupidly borrowed that 200 quid from Audrey's safe, triggering this whole sorry state of affairs – suddenly turns up at the flat to pay back the cash. Hugely miffed at this interruption, Tyrone is set to storm out, looking as if he'd quite like to punch out this guy's teeth on the way. But Maria suddenly urges him to stay, crying: "I love you!" She doesn't actually look as if she means it, but what the hell.

IMAGINE David Morrissey, alias Ripley Holden, the all-singing, all-dancing main attraction of BLACKPOOL (BBC1), appearing on Celebrity Stars In Their Eyes...

"Tonight, Matthew, I shall be Elvis Presley. Or Freddie Mercury, Smokey Robinson, Kenny Rogers, Ronnie Wood, or Diana Ross. Quite possibly, all of them."

Morrissey throws himself into the various songs that he lip-synchs in this remarkable roller-coaster drama with such gusto that he could turn himself into almost anyone he wanted to be.

The rest of the cast carry off their fantasy singing sequences with equal aplomb. Cold Feet's John Thomson, as Holden's put-upon sidekick Terry, mimed to Alison Moyet's Invisible when Holden rounded beat him up for shopping him to the police ("I feel like I'm invisible, you treat me like I'm not really there and you don't really care"). If he had a shave and he'd look the part.

Crashing

As Ripley's wife Natalie (Sarah Parish) dithered about ditching him for DJ Peter Carlisle, they both mimed to The Clash's hit Should I Stay Or Should I Go – which said as much as several pages of dialogue.

Morrissey's business is crashing around him and his family falling apart. But he can still manage the odd joke.

Describing Terry's girlfriend, Ripley said: "Figures like Halle Berry. Face like Chuck Berry."

And when a hooker mixed up in the murder case told him that his son Danny supplied her with drugs that he made in the school chemistry lab, Ripley replied: "Well, it's nice to know he's not wasting a good education."

You can go on as much as you like about the brilliance of contemporary American dramas such as The Sopranos and Six Feet Under, but Blackpool remains a triumph that is uniquely and inimitably British.

Can't wait for next week's finale.

TV'S FIRST LADY OF FOOTBALL ON LIFE & LOVE

When we get to see each other it's REALLY EXCITING

GORGEOUS Gabby Logan may have won over the male-dominated world of TV sport but she was unlucky with men off screen – until she met her future husband Kenny. Here she tells the Daily Star about how she finally found the love of her life...

WHILE Gabby Logan is being photographed in a sexy, slinky outfit, the studio cat decides to pee on her jumper.

Does she throw a diva tantrum? Nope. Gabby just laughs, sniffs the sleeve and screws up her nose.

She doesn't even ask for a clean top to go home in.

Instead, she blasts the offending wet patch with a hairdryer, puts her jumper back on and joins the rest of the crew for lunch. What a gal!

Gabby, 31, appears care-free but despite a successful career as the face of ITV Sport – and being happily married to Scottish rugby star Kenny Logan – the past year has been difficult for her.

After 33 years of marriage, her footballing dad Terry Yorath and mum Christine, a property developer, broke up. The split took its toll on the whole family.

"I don't live in a cocoon of loneliness – 2004 was an emotional year for me," she admits.

"My parents split in December 2003 and it's been difficult. It happened late in my life and it wasn't sudden, but it has been tough."

Heart

Gabby believes the death of her younger brother Daniel 12 years ago finally tore them apart.

Daniel died suddenly in 1992 from a rare heart condition. He was just 15, and life for the Yorath family was thrown into disarray.

"We were all very close when my brother died," Gabby recalls.

"Being the eldest child, I took on a supporting role.

The split wasn't a surprise. I thought my mother would be happier apart from my father, but it's hard for her."

Despite her parents' turmoil, Gabby reflects on the success of her own three-year marriage and is thankful that hers is stronger than ever.

"It's hard seeing my parents' relationship deteriorating," she says. "I love them both."

"My dad isn't great at talking things through. I look at Kenny and feel lucky we meet half way. Kenny's very talkative, which is fantastic, and we're a great match."

Gabby met Kenny six years ago and the pair have homes in London and Scotland, where Kenny plays for Glasgow Warriors. She's still madly in love. "The way we are together is still the same and he does lovely things for me. He makes me feel so special."

"I knew I'd marry him. The first time I met him I was bowled over. Before that I had been celibate and given up on men."

"I'd been dating but didn't enjoy it and felt empty on days like Sundays as I had male friends but no one special." After finding fame it was hard for Gabby to trust blokes.

"In my job you meet a certain kind of man. I'd go into the bar at Sky and then the ITV bar. If men looked at me I'd question if it was because they liked me or because they recognised me from TV."

But Kenny wasn't in awe of her. "He didn't know who I was when we met," she recalls. "He thought I was Gaby Roslin!"

It didn't take long for their romance to turn serious.

"We lived together for six months and got engaged after a year and a half. Marriage just gave us more certainty and it's wonderful," she says. Her long hours at work and Kenny's career mean they have to plan their time together carefully.

"Relationships aren't easy and you have to put the effort in."

"Kenny and I aren't together every day and it's hard. I knew he wouldn't be fulfilled if he didn't play in Glasgow, which is why we live like this."

"But he's grateful to me for giving him this chance. I miss him when I leave Glasgow but we're good on the phone."

"Sometimes I have five flights in a week for foreign trips – it's great fun but tiring. The good thing is that when we see each other it's really exciting."

Success also means Gabby must deal with the pressures of fame.

"It isn't hard for me because I don't get involved in the celebrity circuit or go to showbiz

dos. I also don't put that pressure on myself to keep looking young. I feel fantastic right now and don't worry about ageing."

"I've lived a full life with lots of experiences and it would look silly if I did the Botox thing. I just look after myself and have a strict regime in terms of my lifestyle. I'm not leaving it to chance."

"I'm happy with my shape. I fluctuate by about two or three pounds but only I notice it. Kenny laughs at me when I say I'm bigger, but he loves the way I look!"

And he was very happy with last year's pics of her in GQ magazine.

"He loved them. I knew they would come out well and although I wasn't the cover girl – I think it was Jade Jagger, I couldn't compete with her!"

"It was the first time I'd done anything glamorous so I was really pleased."

A GOLFER's car broke down, so he dumped his clubs in the boot and went to get a bus home.

He sat next to an old lady on the bus, with his trouser pockets bulging with golf-balls.

Noticing she kept looking at the bulges, he told her: "It's just golfballs."

She said: "Does it hurt as much as tennis elbow?"

MOTOR MOUTH

TURBO NUTTER:
It may be diesel,
but this Octavia is a rocket-ship

IMAGE RATING

HERE'S how the Skoda Octavia 2.0-litre diesel turbo fares image-wise.

REAR MIRROR MONSTER: Extremely elegant. New flush-fitting bumper, wider headlights and bigger grille give it that "move over, big car here" threat.

BACKSIDE BEAUTY: Not sensational, but not boring either. Just a well put together piece of work. Smart effort.

PLAYTIME PLEASER: Twin-zone climate control with separate settings for driver and passenger, trip computer, heated, electric, folding mirrors, rain-sensitive wipers, cruise control, eight-speaker stereo with six-CD autochanger.

NAUGHTY NIGGLES: Doors need to be slammed shut, otherwise you get a warning light.

TASTY TOUCHES: Auto-dimming rear view mirror, rear parking sensors, Mercedes-style door mirrors that leave a light on so you can see in the dark.

FAST OR LAST: Unbelievable mid-range power. A real scorcher.

WONGA WONDER: Fantastic value for money. But how long can Skoda keep this up?

WOULD AN ESSEX GIRL LIKE IT? Actually, Essex girls love their little Skodas. But a big shiny one? Well not as a car, anyway.

Skoda's got

SOMETIMES I think I've lost the plot. There I was driving around for a week in the new Skoda Octavia and as far as I was concerned it looked exactly the same as the old one.

Like all new cars these days it's apparently longer, wider, taller, smoother, more impressive and in the case of the new Octavia, say Skoda: "It produces a highly self-confident and ambitious impression." Hmmm.

So I parked it next to the "old" Octavia and I still couldn't tell the difference. Well that's it, I decided. It was my birthday during the week I drove it and as I was now a whole year older, I'd obviously turned overnight into some kind of blind, doddering, old git.

Then, the day before Skoda were due to take it back to the Czech Republic to be cleaned, or maybe just Milton Keynes where partners VW, Audi and Seat hatch their plans for Global Domination, I popped round to Steve's garage to fill it up. Surprisingly, Steve was there himself, actually doing some work. "Hey, George," he said, "is that the new Octavia?"

Looked

"Yep, certainly is," I told him. He looked at it again. "Are you sure?" he asked.

"Yeah, course I'm sure. Look at the registration plate."

"Which one have you got?" he asked, filling it up with diesel.

"Er, it's a diesel ... I hope."

"Yes I know that, but is it a 1.9 or a 2.0-litre turbo?"

"It's a 2-litre turbo."

"Bloody fast isn't it," said Steve. "My mate's just bought one and I went out in it last week. It's incredible." Hurrah! I was not, after all, a doddering old git. He couldn't tell the difference either.

SMART: The Skoda rear end

However, it's fair enough to say that he was right about one thing. It is astonishingly quick.

Now a 0-62mph time of 9.6secs might not sound particularly impressive these days, but a top speed of 129mph gives you some idea of where this car's real strengths lie.

In mid-range, it is spectacular.

Groups of women who knit woolies for their little lambs will tell you that speed kills. Well it doesn't. It's people who drive too quickly, chat on their mobiles and don't look where they're going who have accidents. In fact speed helps. Now there's a slogan that'll have them choking on their lemon-scented tea.

You see, the less time you're on the wrong side of the road, the less time you have to hit someone.

Nutter

A typical overtaking manoeuvre, say from 50 to 70mph, in third gear takes around 10 seconds.

The Octavia 2.0-litre diesel turbo achieves this in just over three seconds. That is blisteringly quick.

Just for fun, and on my newly-acquired private jet runway, the Octavia hit 60 to 90mph in six sec-
